IDEALS AT THE FAIR

MISS ALICE FRANK FINDS SAN FRANCISCO EXPOSITION EDUCATIONAL

It becomes more manifest every day that the effect of the San Francisco fair on the whole of California will be much greater than could have been imagined. As party after party comes back from that wonderful city within a city, it is seen that each is full of the marvels they have beheld. This newly acquired knowledge is communicated to all with whom they come in contact, and thus a powerful educational influence is exerted on the whole state.

"One of the family parties that recently returned from the fair is Mrs. C. E. Frank and her daughter, Miss Alice Frank, of 578 East Third street. These ladies spent several weeks in San Francisco and returned the other day greatly delighted with what they had seen. Miss Alice Frank, who is engaged in dramatic work in the Egan Dramatic school of Los Angeles, said: "I was charmed with the fair. I don't suppose many people have much of an idea how extraordinary are the attractions of the fair until they see them. Even then the whole affair is so enormous that it takes days before its proper proportions begin to be seen. We visited the exposition nearly every day while we remained in San Francisco, and always found something new in it. We met a great many Glendale people while we were there, and they were all charmed with what they were seeing. We saw 125,000 people in the grounds on Labor day, and the immensity of that crowd gave us some idea of what those millions of soldiers mean in Europe. Colonel Goethals, the constructor of the canal, spoke while we were there, and we learned a great deal from him.

"Thousands of people were always standing gazing at the Liberty bell, which was recently brought to the Pacific coast. The foreign exhibits were always full of admiring sightseers. For artistic beauty the French exhibit, I think, surpassed all others. The Canadian exhibit was cleverly descriptive of that country and was the largest of all the foreign exhibits. Germany and Britain were conspicuous by their absence.

"I was particularly interested in the Educational building, where there were to be seen all the most recent developments in educational methods. In particular the department where story-telling for children was illustrated was always crowded with an eager youthful audience. The immigration exhibit also interested me. There we saw the various methods employed by the United States government and the great cities in handling the poor who swarm into the country from other lands and the poor who are developed in the big cities.

"Particularly interesting was the Food Products building. There all manner of food was exhibited and given away in free samples. Many worthy people managed to get several days' meals out of this eleemosynary show. It was a genuine free lunch.

"Largest and best of all the buildings was the California State building. It was a complete epitome of everything the state produces, and was extremely interesting and instructive. I learned much there of what is going on at our own doors. On the whole I am pleased that I saw the exposition. It is an enlightening and broadening experience."

WEDDED IN LOS ANGELES

Friends of Miss Minta Rensimer and of Mr. Ernest Huff, both of whom formerly lived in Glendale, will be glad to hear of their wedding. The young couple were united in matrimony Tuesday at the home of Miss Rensimer's aunt, Mrs. B. P. Hoare, 1606 West Forty-eighth street, Los Angeles. The Rev. Dr. Mills of St. Mark's Episcopal church, Glendale, solemnized the union. Only a few friends and relatives were present. The bride was dressed in white crepe de chine. After the wedding dinner the couple departed for Fresno, the home of the bridegroom.

OLD HORSE PLODS ON

CHARLES M. LUND SAYS AUTO HAS NOT DRIVEN OUT THE HORSE ENTIRELY

Notwithstanding the onward rush of the automobile, the old horse may still be seen plodding along street and highway, perhaps not as dapper and jaunty as of yore, but still in the ring. The auto has not as yet got it all its own way, as the horse shows all over the land demonstrate; and the war in Europe has made demands that will call for a filling up of the gaps in the supply of army steeds which apparently will be needed in war as of old.

If you want to see a bit of the old life when the horse was king in Southern California go to the premises of the Glendale Implement company, 580 West Third street, and watch the horses being shod. The blacksmith is there in all the glory of leather apron and forge; the anvil rings and the sparks fly as in the days when Longfellow wrote. Look around the corner into the alley and you will see the large heap of old and discarded shoes that tells of the business that is being done. Not that it is anything like the old times when a blacksmith would shoe as many horses in a day as his modern Glendale successor is called on to do in a week.

Charles M. Lund, head of the Glendale Implement company, was mending a broken piece of harness when the representative of the Glendale Evening News spoke to him. The work itself on which he was engaged was evidence enough that the old business is still alive. "When I started this business in Glendale 12 years ago," he said, "there was no such city as we have now. What are now streets and lots were then ranches and small farms. Everybody kept a horse or two and the work of the horseshoer was brisk from morning till night. We used to shoe pretty nearly as many horses in a day then as we do in a week now.

"Then, too, there was a brisk business in implements for farms; now we sell little else than hand implements for gardens. Twelve years ago there were no autos in Glendale. About that time the owner of the bicycle shop here imported an Oldsmobile, one of the old kind that looked like a toboggan. Ronald Bears was the name of the importer, and many in the city will remember him. He ran his Oldsmobile to the great disdain of many worthy people who sneered at the 'gas wagon,' but he heeded them not.

"All at once, as it seemed, the state was flooded with autos until it looked as though we could never do without them, and I guess we can't. At that time we were doing a fine implement trade, but the development of the city broke it all up. It was the same way in the East and all over the land. But so it is, the old order must give place to the new.

"This company does a large business in horseshoeing, harness selling and mending, and also in implements. We even do a business in repairing automobiles. They come to us for the blacksmith work that is necessary. At the same time we have quite a number of regular horse customers. No longer do we have the fine hackney or carriage horse. People do not keep their beautiful pairs of carriage horses and drive four-in-hand or six-in-hand as they used to do. Except in the case of the very rich, who can afford to maintain two transportation establishments, few keep horses.

"The wagon industry also is almost entirely gone. Buggies and spring wagons are almost entirely disused and the auto runabout and auto delivery wagon and auto truck have taken their place. I used to sell as many as from 15 to 20 wagons in a season in the old days; now, none. Still we do well in all of our lines, and, as I have said, even the autos come our way."

REMNANT OF ARMY

GEN. NELSON A. MILES TELLS OF GRAND ARMY REVIEW IN WASHINGTON, D. C.

Gen. Nelson A. Miles, grand marshal of the review of the remnant of the Grand Army of the Republic, which paraded before President Wilson and his suite in Washington today, wrote the following description of the event and tribute to the men who marched:

Washington looked today through the eyes of 50 years ago. Its populace and visitors joined with the nation's executive in reviewing the battered blue battalions of the Grand Army of the Republic—all that is left of the stalwart legions, 200,000 strong, who marched with youth's firm step before the White House in review with Sherman, Meade, Sheridan and Hancock at the close of the war that called the army into being.

Celebrated in the most beautiful capital, among the people of the strongest, most prosperous republic in the world, the fiftieth annual grand review of the Grand Army of the Republic epitomized and symbolized the spirit of our nation—unity, and mighty influence on all humanity through unborn ages.

There in the vanguard of this body, unique and filled with the essence of tragedy and romance, marched the remnants of Logan's men—the troops from Illinois. John A. Logan is dead, but can it be I saw his shadow striding on beside them?

Few of the handful of old leaders who are left from the days of '61 and '65 passed here today. Wilson of Delaware, Dodge of Iowa, Brooks of Pennsylvania, and Pennypacker and Sheridan; Osterhaus of Illinois, Andrews of Minnesota, Connor of Maine and Louis Grant, who fought with Andrews; Gregg, that grand old Pennsylvania cavalryman; Hardin of Chicago, Nickerson of Somerville, Paine of Massachusetts, Pierce of Michigan, Seward of Albany, Medford of Oregon—all still living, but not all here.

Their boys trooped by, though, rigid as the dragging chains of time permitted, and with them, in fancy anyhow, if not in fact, their generals went marching on before.

Fifteenth in line marched what remains of the men who fought with George H. Thomas at Nashville. "The Rock of Chicamauga," we called him; "the noblest Roman of them all." In Swinton's history you'll read that his army's Nashville campaign plan turned vanquishment into victory for us.

A naval banner streaming free above the stumbling ranks brought back the memory of John Ericsson. He is not here, but that small group which flew the ribboned ensign well could tell you all about him; how he dreamed the Monitor and heard it scoffed at; how Lincoln overruled the navy and ordered him to build the armored ship, and how at last it saved the Union craft which the Merrimac was mowing down and revolutionizing all naval warfare.

Far down the line were the boys from Delaware, and still among them was their gallant general, James H. Wilson, leader of one of the largest commands during the Civil war, and who rendered important service again in the war with Spain.

Then there were the Pennsylvania boys, once led by the youthful general, George A. Pennypacker, who, still alive, carries in his person two confederate bullets.

In this parade of the Grand Army of the Republic, decaying through time though it is, there lie the lines of a wonderful story, a story which few of us in this day of rush and bustle have time to pause and contemplate.

The Grand Army of the Republic was the outgrowth of circumstances and necessity. Political problems of generations' standing developed into hostilities. The prayer of the people of all sections was that the cup of bitterness might pass, but it was not to be; and the flower of manhood in all sections resorted to arms. Such an army—the remnant of which we see here today—never was and probably never again will be recruited. A million boys 18 or under, and two million 21 or under answered the call to the colors. The great bulk of the army was composed of men under 25.

The theater of war extended from the Potomac to the Rio Grande. Through much fighting there were many drawn battles, though few decisive engagements. Altogether it was a four years' war of exhaustion in personnel and material that continued until the South was on the verge of bankruptcy. At the close of this war of Americans against Americans there was universal rejoicing in every part of the country, though gloom and sorrow overshadowed many hearts and homes.

The terrible, fierce animosity and strong prejudice that had actuated the hearts and nerved the arms of all during the struggle were buried in the last entrenchments. The blackmouthed cannon were forever silenced. The war drums throbbed no longer and the battle flags were furled; and as the smoke of conflict rolled away, the heroes of both armies clasped hands and pledged eternal fidelity and allegiance to their reunited country.

These then young men, who between '61 and '65 tramped many battlefields, have been engaged for years in business activities or professions; or they have become governors, statesmen, pioneers and home-builders in the mighty West.

This organization, whose fiftieth annual review was seen on Pennsylvania avenue today, was started humbly enough. It has grown and flowered in veneration and glory; and though it will in its proper season die sublime, nothing can avail to erase its spirit and influence from the rippling shadows from the Stars and Stripes.

Consider the lesson of this demonstration. On the other side of the Atlantic millions of men are engaged in a desperate struggle to destroy each other, devastate vast zones of territory and bankrupt nations. A colossal tragedy over which the people have no control.

Here a hundred million are enjoying greater prosperity and freedom than any people who ever have lived on the face of the globe. Theirs is the sublime right and privilege of sovereign citizenship.

MUSIC FOR THE YEAR

MUSIC CURATOR OF TUESDAY AFTERNOON CLUB HOPES FOR STRONG INTEREST

Choosing folk music as the program of work for the ensuing year, the music curator of the Tuesday Afternoon club, Mrs. E. W. Kinney, hopes to create a greater interest among the members of that well-known institution in the study of music.

Explaining her reason, Mrs. Kinney states that among musical people there is a wide variance of opinion, of likes and tastes in music, the result being that it is extremely difficult ordinarily to select a program which would be pleasing and attractive to all. In selecting folk music Mrs. Kinney claims that she is catering to all persons, no matter how partial or decided they may be in their likes or opinions. In the folk music of foreign nations the natural characteristics, the modes of life, the habits and peculiarities of our neighbors across the seas are given full expression in a language common to all—music. Hence the universal sympathy and accord of all music lovers in folk music.

The study of American music and American composers will also be continued. All music programs for the club year will be under the supervision of the music section, and the curator desires to encourage in every way possible the local talent to assist in the work. The first meeting of the music section will be held at the home of the curator, 1223 West Seventh street, Friday, Oct. 15, at 2:30 p. m. All club members are eligible. The section meets every second and fourth Friday in the month.

MISLEADING STATEMENT

There again appears in the window of a storeroom samples of goods and in connection large posters have printed on them, "Newspapers refuse to take advertising from us." This complaint is merely for effect, and is used to get the sympathy of the people. The truth of the whole matter is, that is the scheme the firm in question works to make the general public believe that they (this firm) are an abused people. The firm does not want to advert'se in the Glendale local papers.

How much can you count on people who take such methods to deceive the public? Not very much.

MODERN METHODS IN CHINESE BUSINESS

Those who remember Bret Harte's "heathen Chinee," Ah Sin, who "for ways that were dark and for tricks that were vain" was peculiar, may have a vague idea that in business conducted by the Chinese there is a lack of honesty. Quite the contrary is the case. In the Far East the Chinese are noted for their honesty in business and trade. All over the Far East Chinamen are the trusted cashiers in banks and business houses and they seldom belie their reputation. In Japan you will find the Chinese cashier an institution in banks and stores; he is always at his work; never varies; is always up to time with his balance and never short.

What greater tribute to the honesty of a nation could be given? The Chinese built a wall around their country in order to shut out the innovating foreigner. They desired no communication with the outer world. They wanted to live in peace; but the foreigner came. He forced his way into their land; demanded open ports and business and trade concessions and generally upset the ease and dignity of centuries by his noisy and noisome bustling and hustling.

All this was averse to the soul of the Chinese. That nation desired to go on with its old methods and though they were much better than those of the outer barbarians. It must be remembered that the Chinese had discovered the mariner's compass centuries before Columbus was born; that they had invented gunpowder before Friar Bacon was dreamed of; that they knew algebra and the higher mathematics at a time when the ancestors of the present generation of Americans were running about the hills of Europe in coats of blue paint or at the best in scanty garments of ill-tanned skins.

All of a sudden the Chinese seclusion was broken in upon by nations whom they abhorred and when the treaty ports were wrested from them Europe and the United States sent them along with missionaries the scum of their harbors as examples of what Christians could become. Notwithstanding all this the Chinaman was difficult to corrupt. He retained his ancient vices, but did not take well to the new ones. Therefore he remained honest amid dishonesty and was found to be possessed of a native honesty far above the European and American average.

Now the business men of China are thoroughly wakened up. The expulsion of the Germans from Kiao-Chow has shown them what they could have done for themselves had they chosen and it is more than likely that the reforms recently instituted will inspire the nation to still greater advance. Just at present they are forming, in imitation of the United States, large combines for the purpose of business. One of these is a firm of some magnitude, having a capital of about $3,000,00. About one-fourth of this sum has been subscribed by the public. The promoters of the enterprise are twelve men of prominence in commercial, industrial and official circles.

President Yuan Shi-Kai is understood to be in favor of this new organization and has invested a large sum of money in it. In Peking, Hankow and Shanghai the new company will have quarters and will do an extensive business in various lines of industry; it will acquire patents and when it reaches the paying basis of 8 per cent on its actual paid-up capital the government will grant an annual subsidy of 8 per cent of the stock. There has always been more or less graft in official circles in China, which has often ruined promising business enterprises; but with the president of China at its head the new company is likely to flourish and to become a formidable competitor in the field now exploited by foreign companies.

QUESTION OF DOUBLE ALLEGIANCE

In the divine wisdom of Jesus of Nazareth it was written, "No man can serve two masters, for either he will hate the one and love the other; or else he will hold to the one and despise the other." In the experience of these modern times the United States is beginning to realize that the old saying of Christ must be applied to its citizenship if it is to develop in its own way and along its own lines.

No one who is a true citizen of the United States desires to see it develop along any European lines. The United States must work out its own salvation with fear and trembling. When therefore the war comes to an end and the many serious questions to which it has given rise come up for solution one of the them will be found to be this question of dual citizenship.

Can man be a good American citizen and still cling to his citizenship in one of the older countries and hold himself at the beck and call of that country when war breaks out? Common sense should teach us that such cannot be the case. In the old days when corrupt political bosses sought to curry favor with different sets of nationalities in the big cities it was deemed policy to allow these nationalities to cling to their languages; to form their secret societies and to hold themselves in readiness to go to the help of the older countries from which they came. Then there was little question of this country being involved in war and the only question in the bosses' minds was the one of the dollar.

That is changed in these latter days. It has come to be seen that it is not wise to encourage this breaking up of the nation into foreign nationalities. It has become more than ever plain during this war when some foreign nationalities entered into a vast conspiracy that has been exposed by the New York World to interfere with the labor of the United States; to encourage strikes in certain industries and even to destroy by dynamite factories that did not carry on businesses that were agreeable to those elements.

President Wilson has signified his disapproval of these methods by dismissing in disgrace the Austrian ambassador, Dr. Dumba; but the matter should not stop there. Those who come to this country from other countries should be no longer be admitted with the intention of staying here until they have absolutely and forever thrown off the old bondage and all its works. No man can be a citizen of the United States as long as he holds to any form of allegiance to another land. He should be compelled to cut himself loose or else he should not be allowed to enter this land.

The United States is aware now as it never has been before of the danger it has been nourishing in its bosom. It has seen foreigners, even in an official position that made them guests of the nation, using their positions to make threats against citizens of the United States and even threatening to disrupt the land that received them hospitably as guests. That is what no country can endure and still live. It would become the laughing stock of the nations.

Therefore there must be a change. The hordes of Europe must be stayed at the doors of the nation and only those allowed to enter who are certain to become loyal citizens. The idea that the United States is the land of the free and a refuge of the oppressed is all right; but the idea that it is the dumping place of Europe and the arena for European plotting is against all national tradition and belief.

ONLY A BABY SMALL

Only a baby small
Came for our love;
Only a little face,
Two sunny eyes,
Only two cherry lips,
One chubby nose,
Only two little hands,
Ten little toes.
Only a golden head,
Curly and soft;
Only a tongue that wags
Loudly and oft;
Only a little brain,
Empty of thought;
Only a little heart,
Troubled with naught.
Only a tender flower
Sent us to rear;
Only a life to love
While we are here;
Only a baby small,
Never at rest;
Small, but how dear to us,
God knoweth best.

This darling daughter the stork left at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Shattuck, corner Central avenue and Riverdale drive. Everyone well and happy.

CAMPAIGN AGAINST TYPHOID

Seventy-eight lives were saved during the first year of California's campaign against typhoid fever. This gratifying piece of news was given out today by Dr. W. A. Sawyer, secretary of the state board of health. When the campaign was started, a little more than a year ago, the death rate from typhoid in California was 16.3 per 100,000 persons. When the first year was up the rate had decreased to 13.5.

In 1914 the total number of cases in California was 1810. This year the number has not yet reached 1000, and it is believed it will not exceed 1500, notwithstanding the increase in population.

Last year the state board sent inspectors to all summer resorts. In some cases it was found the drinking water at these places was impure, and visitors and campers from the city contracted typhoid.

The proprietors of summer resorts and camping places were ordered by the state board to remedy the conditions and in practically every instance the order was complied with. Inspectors were sent out again this year to see that the good work was kept up and the reports thus far have been favorable. The proprietors of the summer resorts appear anxious to help the state in its fight.

AGAINST BRITISH SYSTEM

Replying to American exponents of the British system of giving cabinet officers seats in congress, Franklin K. Lane, secretary of the interior department, said that in his estimation the scheme was neither "practicable nor advisable."

"Speaking for myself," said Secretary Lane, "I would not have the time to use my seat in congress if I had one. Cabinet positions in America are purely administrative positions as opposed to those in England, where the supervision of the various departments is mostly carried on by undersecretaries.

"As the situation is now, we cabinet officers have all the opportunity desired to make clear our ideas and wishes to congress. In the first place, the recommendations in our annual reports state our positions to congress as clearly and forcibly, and we could to state them if we addressed the members from the floor of the chamber. In the second place, we have ample opportunity to appear before the congressional committees and speak on any measure within our province.

"In addition to that, all bills concerning our respective departments are submitted to us as soon as introduced for the purpose of getting our opinions on them. During the last session of congress I wrote reports on 3000 bills thus submitted. You can realize that I would have hardly had time to make three thousand speeches for or against them.

"Looking at the proposition from the point of view of the congressmen and senators themselves, I do not believe they would favor the plan. I believe that the distinction between administration and legislation, as now recognized, is what they would continue to favor and insist upon."

NOT CONCERNED

It is human nature for mankind not to worry about the troubles of others. There is not a minute that passes but what in some part of the world thousands of people are suffering, but what cares the average man until that suffering comes into his own community?

If everyone in this world will do the work that he can best do, there will be great things accomplished.

AMERICA'S AID FOR CHIINESE STUDENTS

While the greater part of the world is at war the United States is practicing the ways of peace. This country has always taken an interest in China and exerted an influence for good on that country. Not the least of the benefits conferred on the celestial republic is that by which the United States has helped to support Chinese students at various colleges and universities throughout this land. The Chinese, though a reticent and silent nation, are by no means blind to the advantages conferred on them by the United States, and those benefits will in time bear good fruit.

It will be remembered that at the time of the Boxer war, when other nations demanded indemnity from China, the United States, after the amount of its indemnity had been fixed, refused to take the money from China, and that country was at a loss what to do, thinking that some deep scheme was behind such extraordinary action.

Learning, however, the meaning of America's high-souled generosity and forbearance, the Chinese government accepted the $13,000,000 of the original fund and devoted it to the education of a certain number of students every year. Thirty-nine Chinese students have arrived in the United States this year to study on the proceeds of the Boxer indemnity fund.

Thousands upon thousands of acres of land in the United States are not being cultivated. Even in our dear little city of Glendale the vacant lots that have been growing large crops of weeds might have produced much needed vegetables and fruit. So it is the country over—vast acres are going to waste. Why not work a reform in these particulars?

Each person moving in his little sphere in this great world should not overestimate his importance, but remember there are others.

MUSIC CLASSES

Mrs. Eva J. Cunningham, teacher of "the Dunning System of Improved Music Study for Beginners," will open classes Wednesday, Oct. 6, at 3 p. m. at 1414 Salem street, Glendale. The Dunning system is highly endorsed by Scharwenka, Gadski, Leschelitsky, Busoni, Gabrilowitch, De Packmann, Hambourg, Carreno and other prominent musicians. Transposition, maneuvering, sight reading, elementary harmony, technique, analysis and historical stories as taught by this method make the rudiments of music attractive and develop the musical side of child nature.

Mrs. Zay Rector Bevill's "Teaching Piano by Harmony Diagrams" also taught.

TWO YEARS OLD

Little Vassar Chandler Peckham was host at a pretty blue and white party recently, when 15 little tots helped him celebrate his second birthday at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Peckham, 245 North Central avenue. There was everything that goes to make a regular party, including a wonderful luncheon with birthday cake and candles and blue and white decorations. The little guests played all kinds of games and pictures were taken of the various happy groups. There were gifts, too, not only for the little host, but for all the guests, who will long remember the happy day.

EAGLE ROCK'S ANNEXATION BUG

California's dry climate is not favorable to the existence of insects, but, however, there is a bug known as the "annexation bug" that continues to buzz around the ears of the citizens of thriving cities near Los Angeles. This pesky little insect is giving citizens of Eagle Rock considerable concern at present. The Eagle Rock Sentinel of last week, in speaking of it, says:

"If one wanted any reason to believe that there were ulterior motives back of this movement for annexation it could be easily found in the way the petition was forced through the council last Monday night. The men who had charge of the petition fought for immediate action—did not want time taken to see if the petition was legal, or to give the city attorney time to prepare a legal notice involving the city's existence. And three members of the board, neither of whom had so much as looked at the petition, let personal desire supplant public duty and helped rush it through. Why this unseemly haste? It is a mighty poor proposition that won't stand the test of thought and examination. If annexation is such a good thing, why this effort to stampede the people?

There are a lot of people that demand more than blind faith for their vote. They would like to know.

"Why vote to annex until Los Angeles is ready to take this city? The annexation commission positively states they will do nothing now. Perhaps not for one or two years.

"If annexation carries here will it be necessary to vote again if Los Angeles votes more bonds before that city decides to take us in?

"Why not get some ideas from the city council of Los Angeles as to what they propose to do with our $30,000 of tax money? They are the only ones who can speak authoritatively.

"Why has Martin Betkouski, president of the council (and chairman of the annexation commission), failed to meet the Eagle Rock representatives, although he promised to do so?

"Why unite with Bairdstown, a place miles away and unsuitably located, in a bond issue to secure a water distributing system? That looks ridiculous.

"Mr. Mulholland says this city must buy the Eagle Rock Water company's plant to use as a temporary distributor and 'to get rid of it.' Common, ordinary business sense would suggest that we first find out what we would have to buy and how much it will cost. Eagle Rock cannot get cheap water until a distributing system is purchased or installed.

"If straight 5-cent fare is to be secured, would it not be wise to get some definite statement from someone who can speak authoritatively? Thus far the voters have not had a word from anyone who has the power to promise. There are some people who prefer to have something more reliable than the mere assertions of one paid to secure names to a petition or one who is willing to say anything to gain a point.

"It took almost three months to secure the signatures of one-third of the voters to the petition; and many of those will not vote for annexation. At that rate, how long will it take to get a majority for such an uncertain proposition?

STEREOPTICON LOAN LIBRARY

The United States Public Health service believes that "education is the road to sanitary progress." To this end it has established a stereopticon loan library, probably the first of its kind, which is daily sending out slides upon the request of sanitarians, educators and other persons interested in the promulgation of the doctrine of personal hygiene and public sanitation.

The officials of the Nebraska state fair desired to stage a series of popular lectures on hygiene and sanitation. They applied to the surgeon-general of the United States Public Health service for slides. Catalogues containing photographs of the slides and descriptive matter thereon were immediately forwarded to the officials of the fair, together with a blank on which to make request for various slides. The fair officials filled out the requisition and returned the catalogue to the surgeon-general. The slides were packed and shipped, and when the lectures shall have been given they will be repacked and returned to the surgeon-general. In this way a large number of people will have received this important information in a pleasing manner.

The stereopticon loan library covers a wide range of subjects, from sanitary conditions in Alaska to yellow fever. There are special collections on the diseases of children, the hookworm, leprosy, malaria, milk production, mouth hygiene, pellagra, plague, rural schools, smallpox, tropical diseases, tuberculosis and typhoid fever. Each of the sets is in duplicate and in the case of the more frequently used slides there are several sets, so that the applicant will not be disappointed in his selections. Not only are the services of the stereopticon loan library utilized by many private individuals, but the officers of the Public Health service and state and local health officials throughout the country are making use of this logical system of public health education.

TROPICO

Beneath a wealth of fragrant blossoms and many floral emblems, and surrounded by a large concourse of mourning relatives and friends, all that was mortal of Mrs. California Rachel Henry, wife of Rev. Rev. H. Goodsell offered prayer. Mrs. Lillian Ward Sherman, assisted by Mrs. Anna Starkey and Mrs. Knox, rendered "Rock of Ages" and "Abide With Me." Following the impressive sermon and eulogy upon the beautiful Christian character of Mrs. Henry, delivered by Dr. Thompson, who has been a near friend of Rev. and Mrs. Henry the past 20 years, Rev. Peters, as candidate for the democratic nomination for lieutenant governor of Illinois. Elder Peters is pastor of the largest Christian church in Illinois, that at Paris, Edgar county. COMMON SENSE APPRECIATION

BURBANK

H. L. Hadley of Newport Beach was in Burbank Saturday looking over the prospects of a new bakery in Burbank. Although not definitely deciding to locate in Burbank, Mr. Hadley thinks there is a better future for a good bakery in Burbank than any other town of which he knows.

Martin Pupka has just finished painting his spacious residence at the corner of Third and Olive a pleasing green and yellow. In addition to repainting the exterior the interior has been nicely redecorated and other repairs made, much enhancing the appearance of the Pupka home.

H. L. Ward of Long Beach transacted business in Burbank Saturday.

Ed Wiggins, foreman of the Schriner dairy, met with a painful accident Monday afternoon. He was returning from Los Angeles in one of the San Fernando stages, and as the bus was crowded he was standing on the running board. When the stage went to pass another machine he was knocked off, sustaining a severe cut on the forehead, which was dressed at the Burbank pharmacy, the accident occurring at Olive and Second streets.

E. Minert installed two new chairs and mirrors in his barber shop last week. The upholstering is so soft and easy that he has to wake up every patron after a shave.

O. C. Lane and wife and A. Sence and wife returned Saturday night from a ten days' trip to the San Francisco exposition. They made the trip in a Ford and had a most enjoyable time.

The Burbank baseball club played at Sawtelle last Saturday and was defeated by the score of 5 to 2.

PLANTING SPRING BULBS

Garden lovers who wish their gardens or the grounds around their houses to be rich with narcissus and jonquil should begin their work without delay, for fall is the time to plant the bulbs of these flowers. The work should be undertaken as soon as or even before an early frost has weakened the annual flowers in the bed.

In the case of narcissus many households will find it advantageous to naturalize the plant so that it grows and blossoms on the lawn much as the wild flowers do. In many of the parks of the larger estates of England, in portions of North Carolina, on estates along the James river, in Virginia, and in old New England gardens, narcissuses that were planted over half a century ago are still vigorous and produce every spring a beautiful display of blossoms.

To naturalize the narcissus it should be planted in the sod or partial shade. Make a small hole in the soil five or six inches deep, insert the bulb, pointed end up, and press the soil over the top. Planting in rows or geometrical figures should be avoided. An easy method of accomplishing this is to scatter the bulbs as if one were sowing seed, and then plant them where they happen to fall.

When the tulip and narcissus bulbs are planted in the beds, the surface of the soil should be loosened after each rain and the bed kept free from weeds. In the late fall and early winter it is well to cover the beds with a light mulch of straw or leaves to prevent injury from alternate freezing and thawing. This mulch should be gradually removed in the spring when the growth appears above the ground. If the soil is well drained the bulbs will not be injured by severe cold.

Under suitable conditions tulip and narcissus plants will increase from year to year. The bulbs, therefore, may be left in the ground for two or three seasons until the clumps begin to crowd. It is then desirable to transplant them. This should be done from six to eight weeks after the spring blossom in order to allow the foliage to die down partially. The bulbs should be lifted with a spade or fork and after the soil has been shaken from the roots, stored in a cool, shady place. When the old leaves and roots are thoroughly dry they may be rubbed off and the clusters of bulbs divided. These bulbs may be planted as the original bulbs were. In this way within a few years a stock of bulbs is very considerably increased.

WAR AGAINST THE TICK

The freeing of over 9000 square miles of Southern territory from quarantine for cattle tick is of interest not only to stock raisers in that section, but also to feeders in the grain belt who buy live Southern cattle to fatten up for market. The raising of the quarantine on Sept. 15 over a large territory in Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia and South Carolina means that for the first time live cattle can be shipped from the sections freed for anything but immediate slaughter, unless inspected or clipped and certified by an inspector of the bureau of animal industry in accordance with federal regulation. Beginning with Sept. 15, however, stockers and feeders have been shipped from this territory to northern markets for any purpose. Heretofore cattle from these sections, when shipped, had to go into the quarantine pens at the slaughterhouses and be turned at once into meat, irrespective of the prices then being offered for stockers and feeders.

The Southern cattle raiser in the freed territory, moreover, not only gains the advantage of being able to sell his cattle in the free pens, but also is spared the trouble and extra cost of shipping them under quarantine conditions in the stock cars.

In all since 1906, when the dipping work was started, a total of 262,469 square miles have been freed from the tick and released from quarantine. The work of dipping was done co-operatively by the counties, the states and the department of agriculture. There still remain, however, 479,000 square miles in the South still tick-infested, from which live cattle can be shipped only under quarantine regulations.

Those in charge of the work report that where a territory is cleaned from ticks stock raising receives a great impetus, not only because of the better marketing conditions then open, but because, with the tick dipped out of the country, breeding animals can be imported and the quality of the stock improved. As long as the region is tick-infested it is impossible to bring in breeding animals, as animals so imported are peculiarly subject to Texas fever, which is transmitted by this enemy of cattle in the South.

WOMEN CAN FINANCE WAR

"The women of England, by their efforts can finance this war, and it would be good if they would band themselves together and sign an economy pledge."

This is but one of the conclusions arrived at by the parliamentary war savings committee, which has solicited the help of experts to advise the housewife and the civil population that the vital need of wartime is thrift. Other general suggestions are:

No person should build a house to reside in himself.

Any presents given should be war loan vouchers or bonds.

Entertaining at restaurants should be entirely abandoned.

Changes of fashion in clothes should be ignored or suppressed.

Funerals should be conducted always with rigid economy.

Every possible servant should be given up.

No motor cars should be used except for charitable or official purposes.

All "treating" should be abandoned until we can toast a final and complete victory.
